

What Every Corporate Counsel Should Know About Federal Corporate Criminal Liability

The scope of federal corporate criminal liability is surprisingly broad. This program will describe the breadth of federal corporate criminal liability, will explain how federal prosecutors determine whether to charge a corporation when its employees break federal criminal laws, and will provide guidance to corporate counsel concerning the steps that they can take now to reduce the chances that federal prosecutors would charge their companies in the event that employees violated federal criminal law.

Date: Monday, November 8, 2010

Time: 7:15am – 7:30am
Registration

7:30am – 8:30am
Presentation and Complimentary Breakfast

Place: The Townsend Hotel
One Hundred Townsend Street
Birmingham, MI 48009

Presenters

Matthew F. Leitman

Senior Principal, Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone, PLC
Mr. Leitman's practice focuses on white collar criminal defense matters.

Bruce Judge

Assistant United States Attorney

Mr. Judge prosecutes violations of federal criminal laws and will provide insight into the way in which the government assess whether to charge corporations.

Please RSVP by Monday, November 1, 2010 to:

Sandra Bera at Bera@MillerCanfield.com or (248) 267-3345

*Please note that there is no cost to attend this event.
