Adam Chud

Adam M. Chud is an associate in Goodwin Procter's Washington, D.C. office, specializing in litigation and intellectual property. Mr. Chud is a member of the District of Columbia bar and the New York state bar. He received his law degree with honors from Cornell Law School, an M.P.S. in Communications from Cornell University, and a B.A. with honors in Political Science from The American University. As a law student at Cornell, Mr. Chud was the Senior Note Editor of the Cornell Law Review. He has advised a wide variety of clients on copyright and trademark matters, including emerging technology companies, publishers, and nonprofit organizations.

Collette C. Goodman

Collette C. Goodman is of Counsel in Goodwin Procter's Business Law Department and responsible for handling and supervising a wide variety of tax matters, including corporate, international, partnership, tax exempt organization, employee benefit, estate and gift, and individual tax matters. Ms. Goodman advises on a broad range of tax matters in connection with the firm's representation of clients in other areas of its practice, including litigation, securities, railway labor management, banking, environmental, government contracts, union labor, ERISA and employee benefit matters. Ms. Goodman serves as tax counsel to a nonprofit corporation formed to manage product liability claims of its corporate members. For the firm's many corporate clients, including several high-tech companies, she has worked on structuring of business operations, mergers and acquisitions, financial products and stock option, deferred compensation, golden parachute, and other executive compensation matters. Ms. Goodman was of counsel at Shea & Gardner prior to its combination with Goodwin Procter in 2004. From 1978-81, she worked for the U.S. Treasury Department as a Special Assistant to Assistant Secretary for Tax Policy Donald C. Lubick at the Office of Tax Policy, and as an Attorney Advisor at the Office of Tax Legislative Counsel. She received her law degree from Harvard Law School (cum laude), a Masters in City Planning from MIT, and a B.A. from Wellesley College (with honors).

Donald J. Munro

Donald J. Munro is a Partner in the Litigation Department. His areas of expertise include civil rights, labor, and employment matters. He also has experience in administrative law, antitrust, and complex commercial matters. Mr. Munro represents a variety of corporations in the transportation, communications, manufacturing, insurance, and technology industries. He frequently lectures on labor issues at conferences, and teaches employment law as an adjunct professor at The George Washington University School of Law. His publications include "The Continuing Evolution of Affirmative Action Under Title VII: New Directions After the Civil Rights Act of 1991," 81 Virginia Law Review 565 (1995), and "Simple Justice: Judicial Philosophy in the Kingdom of Bhutan," The Green Bag (Winter 2003). Mr. Munro received his law degree from the University of Virginia, where he served as an Articles Editor for the Virginia Law Review. After law school, Mr. Munro clerked for the Honorable J. Harvie Wilkinson III of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

Sandy R. Santana

Sandy R. Santana is an associate in the firm's Business Law Department. Mr. Santana's experience includes the representation of public companies in connection with private placements, public offerings of securities and securities law compliance, and the representation of buyers and sellers in merger and acquisition transactions involving both private and public companies. Mr. Santana is a member of the Boston, New York State and American Bar Associations. He received his law degree from Columbia Law School (Stone Scholar) and a B.A. in Government from Harvard University (cum laude). As a law student at Columbia Law School, Mr. Santana served as teaching fellow for the law school's non-profit/small business clinic. He has helped secure tax-exempt status for numerous non-profit clients and has counseled non-profits on contract and corporate governance issues. Mr. Santana has also counseled inner-city entrepreneurs in New York City and Boston and has presented on legal issues applicable to non-profits and small business at various forums. In 2003, Mr. Santana received a Pro Bono Publico Award from the Legal Aid Society of New York in recognition of his work with New York City nonprofit organizations.
